There are just 75 cases of the massive 2015 Chateauneuf du Pape Extrait, a blend reported to be 70% Mourvèdre and 30% Grenache aged in demi-muid and barrique. Boasting a huge frame, this is a black, tannic beast that demands some time in the cellar, but there does appear to be the requisite fruit and spice to survive such a stay. As climate change becomes reality, I think we'll see Mourvèdre being featured more and more in Châteauneuf du Pape, and wines like this advance the argument.
